Media Release 16 September 2016

The Councillors elected to serve the community on Camden Council include 4 Liberal, 3 Labor and 2 True Independents, which indicates that the party-political voting bloc of the past four years is broken.

CRAG congratulates the elected Councillors, and looks forward to engaging with the new Council.

The community of course welcomes the promise of real participation in decisions and has faith that its voice is now restored. In particular, the conservation of Camden's heritage and environment can now not only be championed by Eva Campbell, a true community representative and long-serving Independent, but also be addressed by newly elected Councillors. A number of these new Councillors have a proven record of understanding heritage significance and the importance of our natural environment to our well-being. CRAG sees this understanding as especially important in accommodating rapid developments in housing, commercial and retail precincts and improved infrastructure so that the long term result is sustainable, healthy, liveable communities.

We will also be writing to each of the new Councillors to ask for a meeting to discuss all the current issues considered important by their electorates and as raised in their campaigns.

CRAG sincerely hopes and expects to achieve a constructive, open working relationship with the new Council, as it has enjoyed over recent decades with previous Councils.
